

"take care"

1. og copes

1.1 prelude

is it me breaking over? yes was this because I got attached? not like that tho was that a coping mechanism? yes

1.2 am i alone

You just have to find what makes ur mind numb and little quiet. You can never fully be fine fellow humans weren't a viable option, even forget girls as an option, even attachment as a cope is scary.
you are just surviving life , step by step, pace by pace.

Oh I broke down all the time I just mastered the act of acting like I'm fine with everyone I never got to be fine or achieve my full potential as mentioned in the first post `hi.md` about I could have made some new tools. before i could come up with ideas for new projects or repos... now i cant decide what to eat.

the part where you can't take it anymore then you try to find solutions to dodge the hard irreversible solution , thats coping.

Try to be friends with some empathetic girls in your college If you can khair. idk whom to approach. yes y'all are busy with their own works. yes I too was busy but I had the heart to check on you, what happened, but no, when it was my turn... khair...

i am sorry to say this but consider your hands to be stained by blood.

you have seen me always laughing or smiling right? Yeah in class or smtg? Yesyes turns out it was a coping mechanism it was all copes from the last 3 years, mutated enough to hide the fact that I was fine.

could I not find a good person I could trust with my heart with, so that we can full together.

playboys want girls for fun and the girls today only want the thrill and the enjoyment. appearance is deceptive.

Everyone has their own coping mechanisms. When one stops working. You gotta look for better ones. That's... Life. Ig...

can academics and hobbies be better copes? surely yes but...

1.3. my inabilities

as for myself with adhd and somewhat in the autism spectrum, i can surely say that people see me differently with my abilities and difficult to actually join actual friend groups. tbh i am currently in 0 private group chats. idk why but i am marked as an ill corner some or the other way which i dont know and cant figure out. maybe i am not normal for the world and what the world really expects. i do my job, i may take time based on the work, i may delay, i wouldn't be able to reciprocate much but i am trying my best to be in accord and oh dear, oh dear, oh...

1.4 final notes

at some point you feel so empty inside that doing nothing feels productive and somewhat safe considering the current situation. atp i am staring at the syllabus sheet knowing what to do but idk i have the strength to continue.

more life throws at me, more i lose myself, i am at a high potential with myself - a single slip can make me or remove my existence

2. fable of the bird

2.1. context

a small piece of attention and attachment was able to fill in the depths of the dark void. to the world which gave me nothing but pain, a single piece of something to care wholeheartedly made me to just get a little bit of the hopes i was looking for.

2.2. is it real

it was nothing but a lonely day in my refuge but then i got a cry for help, a soft chirp for help. it was a helpless and an injured bird trying to survive, lying in my plain porch. it was so wounded that it lost hope in surviving. to the world which has given me nothing but pain, i would have turned my back, but no, as an empath i couldnt give up on that.

you could have asked - what if the bird was a dove; it can be whatever - a dove, pigeon or a crow. it looked helpless, i couldnt take my eyes of. oh those wings and those legs wounded by whatever it had to go through.

i saw it healing, i saw it get along with other birds, i got a sense of hope that i am not lone in this shelter anymore. it was me, i wanted to care the bird, but i didnt know it was of comfort for the bird, i only knew to make the bird heal and make it stable. is it a heartless behaviour that with a lot of care, it became an attachment, because i saw nothing but my helpless state there.

the bird had other plans. it wanted to fly away. for the world which gave me nothing but pain, pain, and pain, what should i reciprocate back, pain!? then i am carrying the cycle forward. but no i am not that way. the bird was focussed on leaving as soon as it got healed, but as for me, a mirror to show affection which this world which never gave me, i gave it all. oh dear oh dear oih oh dear; is it valid for me to show the same what the world showed me, to ignore and be cruel, heartless enough. yeah you can debate on the looks, i would have done the same even it was a crow. but what about me who is still learning what affection feels like, it was a small flower in my wounded and bloody hands. it was my fault that i made the decision to adore it with my blood covered hands.

you can say dont expect much, yeah. even with all the pain, the world expected everything from me, is it not just to expect a little bit of care that the world stripped me of... if you say it is correct, then sorry i dont deserve to be breathing this air.

the bird felt uncomfortable, yes, that was what the world showed to me, but still i went on, i tried my best not to be a hinderance for the bird and oh dear what was the absolute reality.

2.3. the plans

the bird flew, yes, the bird flew away. it has to fly away. i cant force it to stay.

but what about me, yes i shouldn't have expectations, because the world only wants me to not have any expectations, give but dont expect, but what can i say to the world which expected every single bit of me.

caring for the bird gave me a sense of joy which no other work gave me, because i could see myself there, when no one was there when i called, i had to build myself from my ruins, i am not heartless enough to be showing the same what the world showed to me. after everything happened to me, i should be happy like other villains, as they are heartless, they dont expect, they just take. but am i like that?, oh dear oh dear...

i cant even apologize to myself that what went wrong, am i a bad person because i kept expectations.

3. if anything happens

3.1 prelude

idk how i got the courage to sort things these days. but it was a final glow of a star kind of a power. the urge to settle things if something careless happens. - those texts where i had to connect to ppl to whom i have unknowingly inflicted pain on others, or i had someone i didnt show my side but they were truly my coping mechanism. ill never forget them. i can forgive everyone and be forgiven of what i had to go through. ill never be able to forget even if i crossed paths which were painful but i had to go through. it was pure grace i didnt give up in the process the thing is, the feeling of being perpetually tired, the type of tiredness even sleep cant even cure, a feeling of you are just moving where life takes you and you believe that all happens for good in a way that you are destroyed inside but the small bliss of hope just keeps you alive. that is where the beauty lies.

why would i grab attention by showing all of my pain. if my pain won, i am not heartless that i want everyone to notice i am so. if anything happens, i just wanna disappear with no prior notice. if it is for grabbing attention, i did everything, i tried by best asking those who benefitted from me, just to be there, but no, no one stayed. so i let it as is.

if people joke behind my back, about how i feel, how would they know about what is hitting the ground and having a panic attack out of nowhere or a sudden wave of sharp pain hits you...

the people i valued the most, even after everything, soon became to be hitting the final hit in my coffin.

3.2 haunted

whom i thought were against me of my naive desperate acts, whom i thought i am a prisoner of my acts - i just made them know the reality. ik they would have forgotten, but still it was eroding me for the past 1 year.

what you are going through is just a speed breaker, not the end, you will overcome this, i believe in you as mentioned earlier in , the speed breaker is a high potential point. you can slip front and achieve the fruits of your bearing else slip back - life asks you to try again - like a baby trying to come out of the womb. it has to come, but it is painful but the fruits will be forever.

you were the smartest one in our class, do you not want to know how much you will actually be capable of if you try harder?

ah shit here we go again.

try harder? i am passing out every other day, some or the other way.

most of the time it is not lazyness or procrastinating - its just... stillness... waiting some sort of pressure to build. maybe thatll do the job.

but i cant always rely on that. i need a solution but then...

*It's a pretty shitty life to live
But no amount of therapy or anything fixed me So I'm just doing my best with what mental health I have* same here.

trust me, talking will really help where do i start, just like that i cant dump my weight on someone. yeah there are dedicated numbers in the lift and the numbers gemini keeps suggesting.

3.3 being in good terms

i cant accept being in bad terms with anyone, but then i didnt worry as they just come in your life. but what if something happens , i should confess atleast and make sure a single drop of blood doesnt fall on their hand.

if anything happens, ask I wanted to reach out in good terms yes, thats what i can do to reduce my guilt and pain ive inflicted which has turned over and multiplied in ways ever to come back to me.

i want you to understand that not everyone will like you, this is not just with you, everyone goes through that, not everybody likes me, they are not obliged to and it is completely ok, similarly there are a few people i vibe with and with the others i don't, that's how it works with everyone it's all about finding your own people and the ones you vibe with, and it will take time to meet them, even i feel pretty isolated in uni but i just have to wait and hope good times will come, it will not always be this gloomy, we live a long life so there are so many people we meet, so many opportunities to meet the right people

i cant take it anymore

3.4. mirror

would yall survive if i showed the same what the world showed to me?

the world is a better place because of the selfless thought. but at the same time if no one bothered to give another hand, what is the value of life then.

my mistake and blunder was i looked my needs on others, i ran for them possibly hoping that someone can understand me. nothing worked, i was the villain the whole time. self-sufficiency and isolation looks like my only choice, ill pat myself when im heavy, i will be okay this way.

i make people uncomfortable unknowingly one or the other way, i know people curse me behind my back because i care alot that they think i am just a big annoyance. i am the bad guy and the villain after all.

if my cry for help burdened you, i am sorry.

oh dear do you know, oh dear do you know, after all of this pain, the world, yes the exact same world i am talking about, started framing me as the villain just because a little bit of what the world gave me leaked out, the world gave me nothing but pain, but then the world got the sample of what it gave me, it marked me as a villain, oh dear, oh dear, look at that irony.

i cant take it anymore.

the body doesnt forget

imagine you say i have headache, i can say it is all in your head. you say you cant even move or do anything but i dont believe it. how do you feel?

the more you try to bring that artificial drive, the more harder you crash id rather bang my head at the wall in kneels praying while crying than to attempt selfharm at the same time id rather fall off from my home terrace than to heal myself alone like an eagle.

past is past, leave that yeah you can ignore it harder until it attacks you right after you want to do something - like preparing for exams

You can't ignore a broken hand but how hard you try to ignore you have no burnout or smtg like that, why i feel like being trapped tho

Forget past? The problem is what damage the past has caused bro what if you are soo doomed that you dont even have the energy to come out of your comfort zone, even if you come out you are not stable and get hit by another problem and fall down way harder after completing neocolab at night i went to bed feeling as if my hands and face was covered with blood and hand on assaulted 5 ppl. It was more than a physical struggle

It's a constant blank fog like feeling in your head you can't get rid off. It blocks everything. you cannot do anything you want to do and you'll start overthinking and become self destructive

If your mind is fucked you can't just grind through it.

each step makes me fall harder, fighting with my last drop of blood until i pass out looking back

from everyone coming against you, being made to defend and fight everyday, made to suffer while the proudy walk around freely since your school days. also to face a tough competitive exam, to have an intense burnout 3 months before the exams, to face intense internal attacks before and now to have a nervous system which never wants to calm down, to suffer a heartbreaking friendship breakup, to have a body which never wants to forget the trauma which the bloody entitled world gave it, to have a body which doesnt want to feel safe at its own home, to face everything at the same time isn't for the weak.

to feel everyday as a fricking war, to feel like i hand on hand assaulted people with my own hands, to fight and defend myself is also not for the weak yes mistakes were made, but at what cost, to the point that i feel to end myself for others just roam freely as if they didnt do anything and i was all to blame. i cant believe how.

yeah i get it, about this link, what if this link leaks, by chance, what max is going to happen, help me, nah its not gonna happen tho most probably those who see this will definitely make it a material of mockery, thats what this bloody world did, to just mock, what else good is it going to do, just to mock to feel a sense of worthyness?

at the same time, the world is selectively blind on those who are suffering, as if they dont exist. like how.

the path to healing

the small hope of living, having a small candle flame inside me, which made me get through things. but what is it about, healing like an eagle, to pass everyday with no support whatsoever, to just get along with people and get through things only for the sake of getting the work done, and not as someone who would try to get along, to just be there.

the more you try to ignore it, the more stiff your muscles become, more your bones shiver, more your heart feels heavy, and more you lose track of things which excited you before. the more you get through it, your path becomes more narrower with both the sides being life or death, where a small slip makes you fall into the eternity. the small hope for living, where you gather reasons for how to continue life, till when I can ignore this unbearable pain, to the point where all my energy is spent just to hold my life together the never-ending cry of my inner child who only saw pain throughout his life, where his only hope in life was, as soon as he doesn't give up, there was a small hope that things will become better soon. and oh boy what is it now, he is still crying that if i folded in by any chance, i'll start to cry for no actual reason.

idk if it's a joke or not but as i was already suffering, i tried to let go of what the past was holding me of. but at the same time, the past came through with a sharp striking hit at where i was wounded, a wound which was slowly healing, which was caused by the very same people who never stayed when things got harder for me. it was always me, holding myself when things got worse, bit by bit, inch by inch, until i lose all my energy trying to hold it all. i cant take it anymore longer.

to address the allegations: yes y'all want gossips, just smack a template and make it another masala story. the plot wasn't about moving on, but rather it was a hole, deepened by what i trusted the most, the more i trusted, the more i bled in front to share my burdens, my hole and my wounds deepened harder. to be wounded to the point that recovery is a hard alternative to something far worse to this repository, which just acted as a mere wall, just helped me just write and type out my burdens. as if someone is going to read and what's the actual situation. at the same time, the more i bleed towards someone, the more i bleed by their attacks, and my mere inner child did nothing but cry cry cry...

the more i write these entries, the more invisible i become towards the society, more i get ignored. the society claims to be there to those who are wounded, but in reality it is the stark opposite. no one tries to come near a wounded person unless they have a weapon on their own until i write again...

(written and typed with unshed tears...)

the unignorable cry

everytime i try to stay calm, my focus is channelled to my inner child, if i hear closely, i'll hear him crying like he witnessed something which he should not have seen. over the time i feel i have been a bad parent to my inner child. i can't make him quiet by force, at the same time i can't defend him from getting hurt again.

i feel like i am bleeding and no one is there near me. i came to you wounded, i didn't want an advice, i just wanted you to support me. if i shared anything, definitely no one is going to actually try to listen to it. people say they understand... ghanta... they will listen to it in one ear and leave it on the other.

yeah i get it, showing how i actually feel is going to break bonds and make the actual parties which casually ignored knowing everything even though knowing how i am carrying something heavy daily - made you feel bitter of me. then i give you a good choice - you prioritise on your happiness only - be selfish - just follow what your selfish heart says. if you really want to ignore a wounded soul and still show resentment, it's still your choice to declare grudges to a posthumous being.

you say no one will stay forever, but who is staying now, when i called, when i gave the signs, when i couldn't take it anymore myself now. y'all saved me as a first contact when something breaks down, but i can't assurely say i can call a single contact when i broke down. what an irony.

When you try to explain your feelings but it always turns out into an argument and then you're the bad person this is my inner child, he is tired for a long time, i mean a long time, for more than 5 years or so, he only hoped things would get better, but i can hear only his cries. he only wanted genuine care, he made me resort to things i shouldnt have done, i am always hearing to his cries, i am a bad parent, i couldnt make him to stop crying, everytime i fold in, i cry along with him, or i get panic attacks, myoclonic jerks, hypnic jerks, sudden short of breath, sudden gastric reactions, just because i couldnt console my inner child till now.

imagine hating on me while i gather reasons to pass the next 24 hours, eventhough i carry something very heavy which i still struggle to handle.

Imagine being annoyed because someone keeps struggling with their mental health when they're the one who has to wake up inside that same brain every single morning. You get tired of hearing about it. They're tired of living it.

peak of pain is numbness. it wont let you do things unless you try to cope a bit and make the pain less bearable and finish the job.

whom do i run to when things get heavy - everyone wants to hit me in the same spot where i am really wounded. this is the most scariest and disturbing feeling is that you isolate yourself when things get heavy, and no one really comes to find me and just be with me. what if it is all for attention seeking - assume whatever you want, in the near future please dont be sorry that you were not there to prevent the doings.

dissociated so hard i started dreaming about nursery rhymes life force, inevitable rat race and choices to live

we are running a lot, to look at the rat race, to preparing to join the rat race which is already a rat race, then joining a closed rat race and then finally pushed to the international network of a gigantic rat race. with no feelings or emotions, walking like a dead self like a robot which dispenses useful information and resources when asked and just to behave as is when asked.

my jee path was difficult, once you bow you head to it, there is no coming back, once you determined that you are going to this path, its over, there are only two possible outcomes - you finish the preparatory rat race i.e. get into a premier institution or else you die fighting - rarely physical but surely internally and brutally. there is no guarantee you will be safe within yourself either. weaklings die

imagine horribly slipping on the race to the point that it breaks your skull and bones and give you an unhealable trauma to the point that there is no hope in recovery and coming back to sanity. i never had sanity tbh. i ran i ran i ran to the point that my only objective was to move forward no matter what. but a small turn, a small slip, made me fall down to the ground horribly with mental fractures god knows how much time it will take to heal apparently.

and the worst part is, i wanted to get out of it, i wanted to start new, meet new people, turns out i was still bleeding, i wanted to feel safe once again, on the path itself, i made you feel unsafe. imagine getting your life force sucked to the point that continuing life feels useless and you complain that you are an anti-social element, which can only cause harm.

well, if continuing life like this running on reserve energy is the solution, id rather prefer a short ending tbh. idk how well i can continue.

the monster

it is the law of nature that a select people are ruined and tested to the core that they are inevitably left with two choices - to forgive the world and show gratitude to the world which has brutally destroyed his entire sense of safety and his will to continue his life further, or to turn its back to the world. if the world really didnt want me to survive the hardships it gave, if i survived, i will multiply its hardships and give it back what it deserved. but i am on the path of a transitional state, i wanted a little bit of safety, i clung to people in bad and desperate ways, to finally realise that they belong to this same heartless world, which gave me nothing but pain pain and pain.

sometimes the world doesnt realise my breaking point, where do i stand, to be left with no safety nets, just moving forward every day just to survive. at the same time, it takes to be a mahatma to endure this pain but still show compassion to the world.

an entity as a monster or a villain - is a direct product of the same hardships and pain one has to go through. they say, kill the monster before you learn its story, else you will empathise with it and you will probably take its side. but think how the trauma of one should never be a reason to inflict trauma on others. as the stories say - once a monster is created by the same world - it will only inflict pain on others - the chain continues then.

kill this monster immediately, this entity didnt deserve this pain which it had to go through - but it never was a reason to desperately look for safety at the cost of inflicting pain on others. as you see the same stories - monsters who inflict pain are inevitably killed - so do the same to me - i was made the social outcast and to endure a pain only few had to go through, this should never be the reason that i choose to inflict pain.

at the same time look at the irony - the world which makes one endure pain at a stage which he couldnt have to go through - to face hardships to the core and looking at others who got all that they wanted - he wanted comfort and safety - he does not know what actual safety means - he resorts to things which only made matters worse - he clung to people for safety - nothing worked and made matters worse - he goes to the point where he starts bleeding - when the world has given him nothing but pain pain pain, even though he tries his best, his unsafeness leaks out and he is still marked as a social outcast - and when finally he snaps - he shows the world what he got to endure

but what about heroes, they underwent the same struggles, in a transitional state - where i broke down but i try my absolute best to not inflict pain and discomfort - it becomes a literal war inside where my only objective is to not fold in to the pain which has been caused but everytime i try, something goes wrong and i am labeled a villain - for what, to just leak out a tiny amount of pain which this world has caused to me.